The family is a part of society. Therefore, the formation of human personality begins in the family. The family is a complex social group formed by the combination of biological, social, moral, ideological, and spiritual relationships. The family is not a narrow domestic concept, but it is a social community. That is why families come together to form a society.

Just as changes in society affect the family, changes in the family also affect society.

We can see this in the fact that 1998 was declared the Year of the Family in our country. In this regard, the measures developed by our government focused on issues related to social protection of the family, strengthening the focus on the upbringing of young people in the family, expanding the legal principles of the family and strengthening other families. As the first President I.A. Karimov said: "From ancient times our people considered the family sacred. If the family is harmonious and harmonious, there will be peace and harmony in society, peace and stability in the country. Family well-being is the basis of national well-being[1]."

It is important to remember that family upbringing can be successful only if the right conditions are created for the full development of our children. Most of the life of the younger generation is spent in the family. That is why they get acquainted with the complex problems of marriage in the family. Under the positive influence of existing family traditions, customs, rituals and ceremonies, young men and women gradually develop. Traditions and ceremonies become a powerful tool of education.

Our future depends on the young people we raise today. This law also applies to the family's upbringing. The complexity of raising a family is that each family is unique. It also has its own characteristics in parenting[2].

Only when family upbringing is inextricably linked with social upbringing can the well-being of the younger generation be ensured. Success in family upbringing also depends on the provision of pedagogical knowledge to parents, the exchange of experiences in family upbringing, and the active involvement of parents in educational work.

It is important for every parent to have a deep understanding of the duties and responsibilities of raising their children. In addition, a normal family environment, the reputation of the parents, a proper daily routine, timely involvement of the child in books and study, work are also key to success.

It is obvious that the problem of raising a perfect child is relevant in ancient times, today and tomorrow, as well as in the future. People love, respect and honor such people[6].

The source of raising such a rich, mature child begins in the family. The family is such a sacred fortress. How should it be built? What is a family and what are its goals and responsibilities?

The family is a legal union of the two adult sexes, formed voluntarily, on the basis of love, respect, and esteem.

A small castle was built. No more hideouts in this castle. At a young age, playfulness, headaches, masculinity, and indifference are replaced by such qualities as sensitivity, responsibility, thoughtfulness, and responsibility. Every young person should be prepared for this, have a sense of responsibility, understand and study the goals and responsibilities of the family [11].

The purpose of the family is to give birth to a child by mutual consent of the two sexes and to ensure the continuity of nature and society.

The role of the family is to provide for the family both spiritually and economically through the joint management of the couple, and to bring up a healthy, intelligent, well-rounded child in the society. The duties of the parent to the child and vice versa are the duties of the child to the parent[3].

You got married with the goal of having a perfect child and a happy family. But achieving this goal requires knowing the important factors in raising a child, the responsibilities to the child.

Duties of parents to children:

- Give the child a nice name (do not be embarrassed when your child tells others his name); literacy, talent-based education, vocational training and vocational training;
- marriage;
- housing;
- fair distribution of inheritance among children.

Duties of the child to the parents:

- listen to the advice of parents, always help them, be kind, considerate, provide both spiritual and economic support for family affairs;
- Every child should be kind to his sisters and brothers, a guide and companion, an example in manners, ethics, work, science;
- to feel in their hearts what their parents need, to show them practical kindness in this matter;
- not appreciating the moral and economic support provided to the family;
- do not hesitate to visit on birthdays, holidays and feasts;
- take special care of elderly parents, treat them kindly, help them to realize their dreams;
- When the time comes, when they fulfill their servitude, to respectfully observe the final destination, to spend their campaigns with the humble, unpretentious, relatives, the closest people who know and respect him.

Rights of family members.

Husband and wife have equal rights in the family and in society. Here we are talking about the rights established by law. This equality is reflected in the rights to vote, to be elected, to choose a profession, to work, to receive an education, to choose one's partner, and so on. But there is no equality between the two sexes in terms of biological and mental structure. Therefore, there are some differences between the rights and responsibilities of men and women in the family, in the upbringing of children, and in the division of labor in the family affairs and responsibilities of children[16].

A man's job is to support his family spiritually and economically. Sharing the concerns of his wife and children. Being able to shield your family from dangers. Being able to take care of family members.

It is a woman's job to raise children in the family. Wash them white and comb them white. Cooking the food brought by the man, waiting for a guest. Tracking and welcoming husbands and children to work and school[8].

Of course, the responsibilities of a husband and wife are not limited to those listed above. It is impossible to list all of these tasks. Depending on the circumstances of the family, each person should use his or her own thinking, define his or her duties, and perform them in such a way that each guest who comes to the house tastes the salt and returns with mutual respect. let them recite praises to the intellect[15].

Children who see the husband and wife pulling the so-called family car shoulder to shoulder, their manners, and their kindness to each other learn from them and try to be like them. Because the child may forget the advice you gave him, but he will never forget what he saw. This aspect of child rearing in the family should never be forgotten.

Let's say you bought a candy at the market, and as soon as you arrived you gave it to your little one and told him not to show it to anyone. He went to his childhood and showed the sweets to all his brothers. But they don't. They sigh. They say it's good to be small. Everything is small, gifts, sweets, pampering, loneliness and longevity. To prevent this from happening, always distribute it fairly when you buy or bring something home. Parents should not forget about themselves during the distribution process[12].

This is very important. When your children see this process, they will remember to share it with you when the time comes. This fair distribution to the children will be a great lesson for them. First of all, they will love each other, and secondly, they will always remember their parents. Otherwise, if you only share what you bring with your children, then they will not remember you, they will only think of themselves. This mistake, especially when you are old and weak, can be very painful and irreparable for you[5].

Look at your children with one eye, treat the big ones as big and the small ones as small, make it a habit for the little ones to consult with the big ones, respect the little ones for the adults, protect them, approve and encourage them to do good deeds. if you return their work on time and explain to the bed why this work is bad, you will have done a very important and important educational work for the perfection of your children, for your future well-being. When you see their kindness and dignity, you will be happy with your life, and your hard work in raising your children will be forgotten[10].

If we take a look at the development of educational ideas in our spiritual heritage, we will be convinced of how much spiritual treasures we have. They are a deep ocean, an inexhaustible treasure. It is inevitable that everyone will contribute to this ocean based on their character, worldview, level of knowledge and other characteristics[18].

Our sacred sources are the Qur'an, Hadiths, Qobusnoma, Shohnoma, Temurnoma, Boburnoma, Gulistan, Boston, Temur, which are the spiritual heritage of our ancestors. Everyone who reads such masterpieces as "Qutadg'u bilig", "Mahbub ul-qulub" is convinced that education is an important factor in human formation[6].

Regarding the complexity of upbringing, Amir Temur said: "I am convinced that raising a child requires deeper observation and deeper wisdom than governing the state." or death, or salvation, or destruction, or happiness, or calamity, "he said. It teaches that upbringing should be shaped by the family, for which the parents themselves must be brought up[21].

Teach your child to work from an early age. One does not suddenly become industrious. Whether your children are doing well or not, first and foremost, find out what makes you happy, and encourage them in the right way. Praise me for taking my job. Explain to your children that their father or mother, thank God, our sons and daughters have grown up, and now we can trust them and entrust our work to them, without touching their passions[12].

Teach your children to work and think as independently as possible. For example, if a subject asks you for help, don't do it for your child, just explain. Once you've solved the problem on your own, say, "Here's to solving it yourself." That way, your child will feel more confident[20].

Teach your children homework. Order what you can do according to your age.

Suppose you have no taste. Allocate household chores according to the age of your children. Let them know how you are doing and make the food you teach them the best they can. Let them plan and do what they tell you to do. If you have a baby, ask him to pat you on the head. Explain that you felt much better when he stroked your head with his little hands. Your baby will be happy that he or she is contributing to your recovery. His love for you will increase. He feels that you need his love[17].

Parents also cultivate love for their parents and in-laws. Let's say today you came to buy something. You open these things up and tell your kids to bring a bowl. When you put the food you bought in front of your parents, tell them to take it to your grandparents. Your parents will see this and bless your children. It is important for your children to grow up to be blessed with this excuse[7].

The relationship of a couple to each other in the family, the practice of raising a child with perfect behavior. In the family, our children learn to respect and treat each other based on their parents' attitudes toward each other. When our parents are kind and sweet to each other, children will learn to do the same. If we watch and greet our spouse with a smile when we see him at work, "Good morning, island," or when he returns from work, "Have you been well at work, island," then our sons and daughters in the family are also mothers. Seeing his actions, his respect for his father increases. Understands the need to respect parents[13].

Unfortunately, not all families have this kind of mutual respect and affection. In some families, instead of respecting the land, there is a tendency to dominate them and try to "take control" of them. We even meet "mothers" who "imprison" disobedient husbands for fifteen days, "using their femininity." In this way, our "smart" women are trying to influence their husbands. In such a family, the husband's respect and affection for his wife diminish and gradually disappear. Now the husband begins to look for love and respect from his wife, which in turn destroys the stability of the family. Do not slander your husband in front of children[9]. When you wake up the next day, you can talk to your bed without shouting or calling. For example, "I am very ashamed of your situation in front of children. You do not deserve to walk in such a situation. After all, children learn life by looking at us, they choose their own path in life. We must be an example to them. Children are growing up. "it can be said. After the conversation, your children will understand that if the father is smart, the situation needs to be corrected[4].

We have some women who are grateful to their husbands for earning a little more. "Now your cup is pale, your money is in your pocket, you are fat, you are rich, you are drunk?" insults her husband in front of her children. As a result, children become disrespectful to their father, disobeying him, and disobeying him. Children develop hatred for their fathers because their mothers abuse them[11].

Raising children to be well-rounded people cannot be successful without connecting the school to the family. Therefore, the school should expand the educational work among parents. What parents say in meetings with teachers is especially valuable to parents because they learn more about their children. Therefore, every parent who forgets the essence of child rearing seeks to strengthen the partnership between family and school[22].

Before the child enters the school, the parents should keep in touch with the school, keep the child aware of the child's behavior, consult with the teacher, the class teacher and ask him / her to leave the class. He should inform the child of what he is doing. It is formed when the teacher, in turn, informs the parents about the child's reading, manners, behavior, and ability to behave at school. Problems need to be solved together. Only then will the same requirements be met. A parent whose child goes to school becomes a member of this community. Therefore, parents must be actively involved in the social life of the school. The teacher should also work closely with the student's family.

It is very important for parents to cooperate with community activists, labor veterans in the field of education. These activities contribute to the upbringing of the family. Raising a perfect child requires the cooperation of family, school and community (neighborhood).

In conclusion, in the current context of economic and social changes, the focus on family upbringing is becoming more and more relevant.
